Remember When...

we dedicated our yearbook to our departing teachers and friends

Mrs. Vesta Browne

September 4, 1973 was Mrs. Vesta Browne's first day of school at Longmeadow High School. For the next 35 years, she served the school and community with her tireless work ethic and dedication. Her first position at LHS was as a teacher in the Business Department, where she taught courses such as Accounting and Personal Finance. She later became the Department Chairman, a position she held for many years until becoming the Dean of Students in September 2003. In addition, she has been the Advisor to the Key Club for over 15 years. Her dedication to the organization is unsurpassed as she attends the Key Club activities on the local and national level with the students. As the Dean of students, her office is often the hub of many activities. In any given day she can be seen in the cafeteria, running down the hall(walkie talkie in hand, of course!) or even flipping burgers at a football game. This summer, Mrs.Browne will start a new phase in her life-one filled with much traveling, plenty of cooking and most importantly spending time with her husband, children and granddaughters. We wish her all life's best and thank her for walking through the doors of LHS on that September morning, all those years ago.

Mrs. Linda Berard

Linda Berard spent a lifetime devoting herself to helping children, and in return she earned the respect and love of her students. Mrs. Berard was a dedicated teacher and devoted Red Sox fan. A true Irish soul who always had a smile, even when on some days a smile was hard to give. She loved her job and proved over and over again her love for teaching. It could be a small reward, such as a student getting an A on a project or a returning student, long graduated, showing his teacher how he has reached success as an adult with her help and kind words. In her retirement, Mrs. Berard will be missed by all. But, knowing Linda, she will fill her days with her cherished grandchildren, lots of love from her husband and maybe a trip or two. We all wish her the best!

Mrs. Jane Murphy

After teaching English at Longmeadow High School for over 30 years, Mrs. Jane Murphy retired last fall. Jane was an excellent teacher whose high expectations for her students inspired them to realize their own potential, becoming better readers, writers, and thinkers. In addition to teaching, Mrs. Murphy served as the Class Advisor for countless classes and organized a multitude of field trips to expand her students' horizons. Jane always gave back to her profession by serving as a mentor for countless young teachers and as a supervising teacher for many student teachers. She is greatly missed by her colleagues who admire her for her passion, her enthusiasm, and her sound advice. In retirement, Mrs. Murphy is living life to its fullest with a joy and energy she always brought to her teaching at Longmeadow High School.

Mr. Ron Hirsch

Years ago, Ron, as the resident "learn'd astronomer", taught two very different professional development courses. One course was Astronomy. The other was about the use of poetry in science courses; how a teacher could use the language of the poet to inspire and enhance one's understanding and appreciation of science. When compared, they showed Ron's inquisitive intellect and passion for his subject matter and scientific theory along with an appreciation for a sense of wonder about the natural world. They also helped to explain his teaching philosophy, instructional methods and many contributions to the school.

In Astronomy, Ron the scientist impressed us with his knowledge of science. he explained black holes and white dwarfs; he charmed us with the strange ups and downs of quarks; he demonstrated how theorists could manipulate figures to prove something intangible was "proven mathmatically" to exist. Ron was instrumental in developing three new courses: Conceptual Physics, Astronomy, and the two new physics courses. He wrote grants to develop curricula and upgrade the use of technology in the classroom.

In the poetry course, Ron the artist shared poems infused with imagery that captured his sense of wonder and majesty of the natural world and showed us how he used those examples in his classes. He wrote and spoke the language of science, but imbedded his instruction with samples of poetic imagery to inspire and enhance the curricula. Ron established the Outing Club where students enjoyed backpacking, canoeing, rock climbing and cross country skiing. It was here that many students probably experienced what Walt Whitman expressed.

> "Till rising and gliding out, I wander'd off by myself,
> In the mystical moist night air, and from time to time,
> Look'd up in perfect silence at the stars."

Ron assembled proofs, figures, charts, and diagrams to scientifically explain the knowable. He also celebrated the wonder of what is not known because it offered the excitement of exploration and discovery. How fortunate the faculty and students have been to have had such a dedicated scientist, artist, teacher, and colleague.

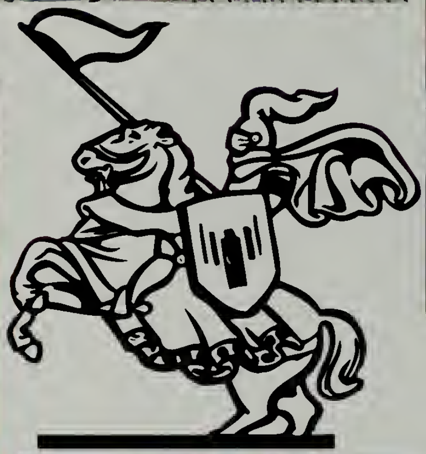
Remember when . . .

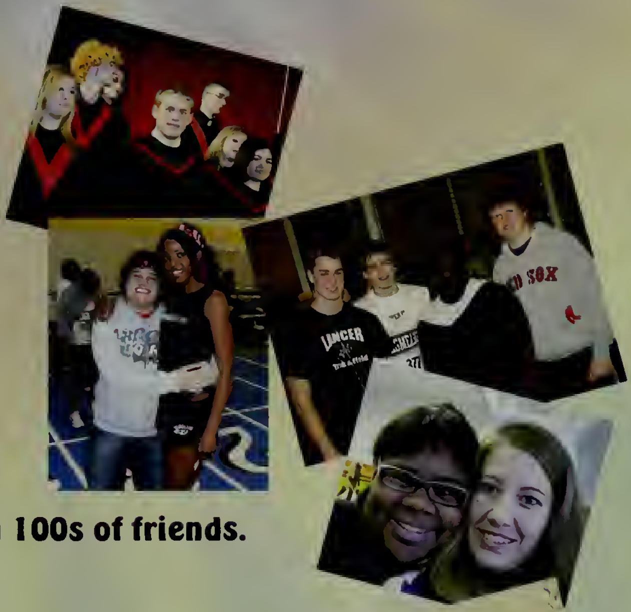


Remember When

Ok, we know all you grammar gurus are already complaining about the lack of question mark at the end of "remember when." After all, the phrase, correctly expressed, should read, "[Do you] remember when...?" Not so fast, punctilious punctuaters; we beg to differ. The editors of your yearbook believe, contrary to more pedestrian interpretations of the aforementioned expression, that "remember when" is not a question; it is a command. And our yearbook is not asking whether or not you can recall a particular event or time; this yearbook requires you to bring these events to the front of your memory where they belong. Our yearbook demands that you recall the importance of this year and this time of your life.

"Remember when.." can not be a question because we assuredly do remember the events of the last few years; we just don't thoughtfully consider these events every day. Many times we allow these days to slip away and become thinner, less relevant, and when our daily existence occupies such a large place in our hearts and minds, we replace the significance of the past with the confusing present and the onrushing future. Forget these days? Not possible.

No, we are just reminding our readers, our classmates and our faculty, to contemplate the significance of these days recently passed. They were good ones, maybe the best we'll have, and we shouldn't let them go without some thoughtful consideration. We will avoid the usual cliche', "Stop, and smell the roses," and insist that you:



remember when we played, both musically and athletically.

remember when we made new friends every year.

remember when every day was an adventure we lived with 100s of friends.

remember when all our world was a stage on which we played.

...Just remember!

Senior Class Officers: Matt Schweiger, Tom George, Rob O'Reilly, Vincent Yu and Madelaine Kearing, and Advisors: Ann Moore, Amy Brazee, and Karla Drake

To the Class of 2009:

We made it. More than four years ago, we came to this school as a bunch of freshmen with no idea of what to expect at LHS. Some of us expected to be harassed by seniors; some expected eight hours of homework every night, and some just did not know what to expect. Four years later, we know that whatever we once thought and feared doesn't really matter, and our diplomas prove that. As we moved on through freshman year, we began to see Glenbrook Bulldogs and Williams Wildcats combine to become the Longmeadow Lancers that we are today. A trip to Fenway Park to see the Red Sox destroy the Orioles only kept the ball rolling. Soon, we were sophomores, and with a year under our belts we were more confident than ever. Together, we made it through Lock-In, as we all somehow managed to stay awake until six in the morning despite dodgeball tournaments, full court basketball games, and dance parties that raged until the sun came up. As the year moved on, we all enjoyed a terrific Sophomore Dinner Dance. During our sophomore year, when more and more of our classmates became stars of Longmeadow's athletic, academic, musical, and artistic programs, the rest of the school community began to realize that the Class of 2009 is truly made up of a group of special students. Before we knew it, we were juniors. Upperclassmen. For some of us, junior year came with an introduction to AP classes and varsity sports. For others, junior year meant becoming first chair in orchestra or band. For all of us, however, junior year made us realize that the next chapter of our lives was really not all that far away, and this only brought us closer together. Each and every one of us made it through junior year, and we prepared ourselves to get out of school in May, and for prom, High Meadows, and graduation parties. Unfortunately, as we came into school in September of 2008, many of us realized we looked past the first half of the year. Many of us wondered why we were at school until ten at night for the senior play when we had hours of homework to do and college applications looming in the distance. Anyone who saw our production of West Side Story knows exactly why we did this. For three days in a row, it was nearly impossible to find a seat for the best Senior Class Play ever produced at LHS. The effort put in by every person involved with this play -the stars, the Pit, the chorus, the stage crew, the choreographers, and of course the director and producers- absolutely shined as the audiences rose in standing ovations and the curtains closed. The togetherness we all enjoyed during the senior play soon came to an end, as the Pirates and the Sailors went at it during the Powderpuff game. The connection between us only grew stronger as our time here at LHS came to a close. Whether we cried over gym volleyball, gamed in the BTC, or stayed up way too long studying for a test that we no longer remembered anything about, LHS and its memories will always have a lasting impact on us. The impact we will have on LHS, however, will be much greater. Our musicians have performed in Austria, Carnegie Hall, and everywhere in between. Our sports teams have won every title there is to win, be it state, Super Bowl, Western Mass, or league. Our artists have created work that is undoubtedly professional quality. Members of the debate, mock trial, and As Schools Match Wits teams have had as much success as anyone. While our achievements show what we have accomplished, they cannot begin to measure the impact we've had on this school over the last four years. The impact cannot be defined, nor can it be exaggerated. This class has had an individual effect on each and every member of Longmeadow High School, in ways that can and cannot tell. And as we move on to the next phases of our lives, we should hope to be fortunate enough to find another group of peers that are as close-knit, caring, and supportive as this class is. As your class officers, it has been an honor to represent you every step of the way, and we thank you for giving us all the support we could have ever dreamed of. Through this rollercoaster ride that has been our time at LHS, we've had our ups and our downs, our rises and our falls, but know that we leave here on a high. Others will think of the class of 2009 and smile; they know that after we leave, LHS will never be the same. Congratulations, you deserve it.

Budget Cuts Threaten Teachers' Jobs

y Sawyer Hicks

LHS might be down three achers if the new proposed budet is approved. On January 26, the ongmeadow School Committee ofcially released the proposed budet for fiscal year 2010 (FY10). In eating the budget, the school mmittee's finance subcommittee ced the daunting task of formulatg a financial plan that did not comromise the standards of the ongmeadow Public Schools while tting within the restrictions forced on them by the recession.

They succeeded in the latr area, but it will take time to see w they grade out on the former. he FY10 budget total of 1,239,338.97 is surprisingly a deease of $83,191.03 from the FY09 vised budget. Although it sounds onderful that the school system is track to save $83,000 dollars, here exactly is that money coming 34% drop from FY09 to FY10, saving $176,000.

However, it is the tendency of most costs to rise each year. Thus, this $176,000 is offset greatly by increased expenses in areas such as supplies and materials and what the budget lists as "Other salaries," custodians, substitutes, etc

Unfortunately, cuts had to be made in facets of the budget other than the school choice program. Professional salaries present the FY10 budget's highest figure, $18,577,571.56, or just below 60% of the total expenditures. This number of each school held staff meetings to reveal the proposed financial plan and introduce them to the unfortunate circumstances. The document itself stresses the difficulty with which each proposed cut was decided. The finance subcommittee adnits in it hat. We have attracted some very talcted and highly respected educators to our high school. Losing these educators will diminish us."

They ultimately elected to cut three teaching positions at the high school, one each in the foreign language, art and business/technology departments. There are alternatives to these cuts that will be looked into, at each of the middle schools. Adtionally, the guidance secretary potion, vacated earlier this year, will n be replaced.

The cuts at the high scho present an especially interesti case. The likely result of the cuts w be a reduction in the number of eletives offered by the three depaments affected. Further, this cou have a negative impact on t school's accreditation status with t New England Association of Scho & Colleges (NEASC), and the hi school is no stranger to accredittion issues.

The thirty-five page budg summary included a table of the bu gets from fiscal years 2007, 2008 a 2009 (original and revised). In ea of the previous three years, the bu get had increased. Notable is the fa that last year's revised budg showed a 2% increase ($479,00

Obama's grassroots organization and innovative Web campaign is credited with inspiring young and first-time voters to participate heavily in the election.

The values, fashion and personal vitality of the Obama family resonate with Americans. Public interest in the first family rivals that of the interest in the Kennedy family in the 1960s.
